

John S. White

John S. White is the Deputy Director of the National Finance Center. He has extensive management, operations, and finance experience managing large-scale change projects, product line growth, financial systems design, and revenue-cost realignment actions.

John possesses a broad range of knowledge in general management, finance, human resources, and strategic planning competencies through his 25 years of private industry experiences.

John has a Masters of Business Administration from Fuqua School of Business, Duke University, and a Bachelor of Science degree in Business Administration, University of Tennessee. He is a Certified Public Accountant (CPA) and is a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants.

John is married with two children and lives in New Orleans, Louisiana.